

College students need an easy way to access recipes based upon the ingredients they have at their disposal. The recipes should be simple and easy to make!

Create a program that finds the user a recipe based on their selected ingredients.

Our program is easy to use and becomes an end-to-end resource to find the recipes perfect for what the user has access to!

The user enters each ingredient they would like to use, when they are finished they enter "done". Then, the user is presented with a list of recipes and it prompted to pick which one they would like the instructions for. When the user enters the number that correlates to their selected recipe, the program takes them to the website dedicated to that recipe for its instructions!

We found an API called Spoonacular that has access to thousands of easy to make recipes.
